NEW DELHI: ASHA foundation, a social organisation that helps students from the slums by financing their education, celebrated the admission of 188 children from the city's poorest slums to Delhi University and other prestigious colleges.

"Every day a child from the slum goes to college, every time they graduate, every time they find a job, a small miracle is taking place," said Union Home Minister P. Chidambaram, speaking at the event, 'Celebration of Learning 2011' on Thursday.

Since 2008, ASHA has sent nearly 600 children to colleges and the first batch of students to attend Delhi University graduated this year.
